Dear Sweet Briar Alumnae and Friends:

“Céad míle fáilte!” - “A hundred thousand welcomes!” With this traditional Gaelic greeting, we are pleased to sponsor the newest addition to our travel repertoire, TOWN & COUNTRY LIFE IN DUBLIN AND KILLARNEY, a unique opportunity that captures the essence of the “Emerald Isle.” This exclusive Sweet Briar travel program is ideal for exploring this land’s history, culture and way of life.

Swept by winds traveling thousands of miles across the Atlantic Ocean, Ireland is a land of craggy mountains, stream-carved glens, rolling moors and sparkling lakes. From this remote but lovely island, generations of intrepid Irish men and women have gone forth to enrich the world, as saints and scholars, statesmen and soldiers, artists and poets. This vibrant nation has taken its rightful place in the vanguard of the New Europe, while preserving its age-old Gaelic language and culture. The grace and tranquility of a bygone era live on here—in the stately Georgian townhouses of Dublin, the inviting neighborhood pubs, the charming villages of Killarney’s lake district and a ride aboard a traditional horse-drawn jaunting car.

Soak in the authentic Irish ambiance while staying three nights in Dublin’s Brooks Hotel, located within walking distance of Grafton Street and St. Stephen’s Green, and four nights in Killarney’s intimate Plaza Hotel, located just steps from beautiful Killarney National Park.

Among the many included features of this program are the COSMOPOLITAN CONVERSATION, when Dublin residents will discuss with you their nation’s economic and political development and the CULTURAL TRADITIONS, when local performers regale you with the musical and narrative heritage of the Irish countryside. Exclusive guided excursions, lectures, specially arranged cultural activities and a resident Program Director to accompany you throughout your stay will further enhance your understanding of Ireland’s traditions and history.

KILLARNEY

Dramatically framed by the tranquil Lakes of Killarney, rolling hills abloom in heather and the craggy profile of Macgillicuddy’s Reeks, this inviting country resort has cordially welcomed visitors to the southwest of Ireland for more than 200 years. Known for its citizens’ sharp sense of humor and their warm hospitality, Killarney offers a delightful combination of quaint shops, boutiques and world-class restaurants in a classic Irish country setting and makes an ideal point from which to discover the stunning beauty and cultural riches of the Killarney Lakes and Dingle Peninsula. Rising above the town center is St. Mary’s Cathedral, an elegant Gothic Revival edifice designed by the celebrated Victorian architect Augustus Welby Pugin.

LAKES OF KILLARNEY AND THE GAP OF DUNLOE

County Kerry holds the most spectacular scenery in all of Ireland. Within the boundaries of Killarney National Park lie three pristine bodies of water—Upper Lake, Muckross Lake and Lough Leane. The remote, fjord-like Upper Lake flows into the two lower lakes via the Long Range River. The hills surrounding the lakes offer stunning panoramas, particularly from Ladies’ View, where Queen Victoria’s companions paused to admire the scenery, and from the Gap of Dunloe, a starkly beautiful mountain pass carved by glaciers during the last Ice Age. From Kate Kearney’s Cottage, where a winsome Kerry lass operated a speakeasy in the 19th century, experience the gap’s stunning scenery from an authentic Irish perspective during a relaxing ride through the countryside aboard a jaunting car, the traditional two-wheeled, horse-drawn carriage used throughout rural Ireland since the early 19th century. Then board a specially arranged cruise on scenic Lough Leane, enjoy spectacular views of the limestone caves lining the shore of Muckross Lake and end with time to tour the grounds of historic Ross Castle, ancestral home of the Clan O’Donoghue.

MUCKROSS HOUSE

The imposing Elizabethan-style mansion of Muckross House, built in 1843, epitomizes the leisurely lifestyle of Ireland’s landed gentry during the 19th century. Commissioned by the Irish statesman Henry Arthur Herbert and his wife, the painter Mary Balfour Herbert, it stands amid beautifully landscaped grounds on a peninsula separating Muckross Lake from Lough Leane, with Purple Mountain and Tomies Mountain in the foreground. The manor house is appointed with period furnishings, and the estate includes traditional farms replicating Irish rural life in the 1930s and 1940s. In 1861, Queen Victoria stayed here during her royal visit to Ireland.

A cruise on Killarney’s Lough Leane (Lower Lake) reveals the enchanting lake-side setting of Ross Castle, the last Irish stronghold to fall to Cromwellian forces in 1653.
DINGLE PENINSULA
On the rugged, sea-girt Dingle Peninsula, where sheer sandstone cliffs plunge into the blue waters of the Atlantic Ocean, the ancient Celtic customs and the lilting Gaelic language have survived to the present. Remnants of its prehistoric past can be found in its 500 clochans, beehive-shaped stone huts, and the austere but lovely ninth-century Gallarus Oratory, one of Ireland's earliest Christian sanctuaries. Perched atop Slea Head at the foot of Mount Eagle is Dún Beag, a beautifully preserved Iron Age fort offering views of the windswept Blasket Islands in the distance. In the picturesque fishing port of Dingle, brightly painted houses and shops cluster around the harbor, and inviting pubs feature freshly caught seafood and lively traditional Irish music.

DUBLIN
Built upon the banks of the River Liffey, Ireland’s capital has retained its rich heritage while confidently embracing the New Europe. In the heart of its oldest quarter stands imposing Dublin Castle, an Anglo-Norman structure that once symbolized English dominion over Ireland. Its Record Tower and Bermingham Tower survive from the 13th century, while the elegant State Apartments, the ornate Throne Room and the neo-Gothic Royal Chapel date from the 1700s and 1800s. From the pulpit of St. Patrick’s Cathedral, a beautiful 13th-century Gothic edifice, the celebrated clergyman and satirist Jonathan Swift preached to his flock. Stately Trinity College, established by Elizabeth I in 1592, includes such luminaries as Oliver Goldsmith, Edmund Burke and Samuel Beckett among its alumni, and its Old Library houses the wondrous Book of Kells, a masterpiece of medieval Celtic manuscript illumination reflecting the creative genius of ninth-century monks. Dublin's contemporary face reveals itself in the fashionable boutiques along Grafton Street and in the lively Temple Bar district, with its cosmopolitan assortment of world-class restaurants, inviting cafés, hip pubs and stylish galleries.

POWERSCOURT
Located in a stunning setting beneath the forested slopes of the Wicklow Mountains, Powerscourt House and Gardens represent a harmonious fusion of the works of man and nature. Commissioned in the mid-18th century by Richard Wingfield, the First Viscount Powerscourt, this elegant mansion is the finest example of Palladian architecture in Ireland. Its magnificent late Victorian-era gardens were completed over a century later and reflect the influences of the renowned European palaces of Versailles, Schönbrunn and Schwetzingen. The Perron, an Italianate mosaic staircase, leads from the manor house to Triton Lake, the focal point of the estate grounds, where a Roman-style fountain gracefully arcs a jet of water almost 100 feet into the air. From here you can stroll through the exotic maples, palms and azaleas of the Japanese Garden and admire the tranquil Dolphin Pond, surrounded by graceful conifers.

Emerald meadows, cascading glacial streams and rugged mountainsides create some of Ireland’s most beautiful natural scenery at the Gap of Dunloe.

Stroll along the streets of Dublin and stop in a classic Irish pub or a traditional family-owned shop.

CULTURAL TRADITIONS

STORYTELLING
The storytelling tradition forms a rich part of the literary heritage of the Celtic peoples—especially the Irish. In ancient times, the shanachies, or professional storytellers, were not only transmitters of oral literature, but also historians, genealogists and chroniclers of current events. In an era when the bonds between narrative and song were indissoluble, these bards recited the customs and history of their people in epic lyrical poetry to the accompaniment of music. Some shanachies resided permanently in their communities as village storytellers, while others traveled the countryside and offered their stories and songs in exchange for food and lodging. A specially arranged gathering with an authentic shanachie in Killarney provides an extraordinary opportunity to experience this fundamental element of Irish culture, which continues to thrive, particularly in the southern and western parts of the island, where people still speak the ancient Gaelic language.

MUSIC
Ireland is the only country that has a musical instrument as its national emblem—the harp. While much traditional Irish music features the recognizable sounds of the uillean pipes (similar to bagpipes), melodeon (a simpler version of a button accordion), fiddle, flute and tin whistle (also known as the penny whistle), it is the harp that symbolizes the nation and appears as an icon on Irish coins and bottles of Guinness. The harp at Trinity College in Dublin, a rare pre-16th-century example, is the style of harp that this ubiquitous symbol depicts. The harp is not unique to Ireland, but it has been played here since the 10th century. Listen to the soothing tones of this soulful instrument as a local virtuoso performs traditional tunes at an exclusive recital in Killarney.
